You are free to visit this site without first identifying yourself. If you wish to make a comment on this site's blog or to submit an enquiry re a fixed quote, you will be asked for information which will allow us to personally identify you.

While this site does require a name and email address to submit a blog comment, it is open to commenters to use pseudonyms. Please see our Terms of Use for further information regarding this site's blog.

Fixed fee enquiry information is passed to Miss Heimark to enable her to make telephone or email contact as requested. Your personal contact details and/or the reason for your enquiry are not retained on this site and will not be passed to any other party. Please see Chambers' Data Policy for further information.

The purpose of the Contact Box is to enable users of the site to make brief no obligation enquiries and to leave the contact details of their choice in so doing. You must not post, email, upload, deliver or send by any method any papers, records, electronic files or packages to chambers or this site without obtaining our prior written permission. The reason for that is that no barrister – client relationship is formed simply because you send us information via the Contact Box or by any use of this site.

No unannounced "drop-in" appointments are available at chambers' physical address – and all non-client contact must come via the Contact Box or via Miss Heimark's telephone number as noted on the side-bar of this site.
